OPENING OF THE CONFERENCE
11:30-13:30	OPENING SESSION
Nowadays we have no doubt that the financial and economic crisis has an impact on general development and growth asymmetrically and with different force. The European Union, its member states and their regions, are today more exposed to global shocks and international competition than any time before. The European scene represents different features of economic, social and territorial development. The European territory has many competitive advantages as well as challenges to meet. This opening session will start a brainstorming discussion on the future of European space and territorial impact of the crisis. Europe is changing – the questions are inter alia: How is the European space changing in the XXI century and how is the financial crisis influencing the European space?

VISIONS OF THE SPATIAL AND SOCIO-ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OF CENTRAL-EASTERN EUROPE
The debate during this session will concentrate on relations of Eastern Europe countries to the European core development areas. The balance of territorial influences is changing, and the strengths and weaknesses of regions are affected asymmetrically by crisis – the question is – are the Eastern European countries still a periphery of Europe and what are their development visions and challenges they will have to face. A place-based approach is the way to increase the territorial cohesion and development potentials at European, national and regional level. We will try to outline new spatial ideas for European territories included in the key European and national documents. The session will start a discussion upon where the peripheries are today and where will be the core of Europe in the future.

In this panel we would like to bring closer territorial cohesion with functional understanding and planning as it seems to be an important element which can improve development of European space. The questions are – how functional areas could strengthen the European space, are they an important growth factor? During this session we would like to discuss what are the challenges for future cooperation in strengthening territorial competitiveness and cohesion.

More focus on Europe's global advantages, links and flows seems needed in today's world.
